

Creativity at its best

Taking creativity to a higher level is the aim of the Create Away courses. From landscape to fine art, the Create Away team offers expert tuition, stunning locations and the chance to take your photography one step further

Based in the glorious Camargue area of southern France, which encompasses the Rhone delta in the east and a series of salt marshes in the west, Create Away offers some fabulous courses for photographers. The area is famous not only for its landscape and wildlife but for its wild horses, and Create Away make the most of all these features with their dedicated workshops.

Alongside this, they are now offering some unique new courses including Fine Art Photography with fashion and portrait photographer Nicolas Bertrand and Create Away director Serge Krouglikoff, whose vast experience in editorial photography includes working for Vogue and Harpers. Working with professional models, in small groups, the shoots will take place in secluded locations in the spectacular Camargue landscape, using the natural environment as both backdrop and prop.

Don't forget that Create Away also offer non-photographic cultural courses, as well as organising some fantastic activities such as horse-riding, painting, wine-tasting and cookery – so partners can enjoy themselves while you are concentrating on your photography.

Photographers will be guided through the process of directing the model and exploring light and form. A wide range of accessories, from reflectors to flash, will be provided to ensure that images have that professional look. Emphasis, here, is on developing an individual photographic style and there will be plenty of advice on technique. When it comes to post-processing and editing work, Nicolas and Serge will be on hand to guide and advise. This Fine Art course is aimed at the experienced or intermediate photographer.

For the nature loving photographer, nothing could be more exciting than photographing the wild white horses of the Camargue. Set among unspoiled wetlands, natural lakes and marshland, the horses are guided through their natural habitat by Guardians at dawn and dusk, offering photographers the chance of fabulous images. Whether you are an experienced photographer or a complete beginner, you will be given expert guidance in the fundamentals of photography right up to the most sophisticated techniques, including post-production. It's a chance for that once in a lifetime shot. ■

For your stay in the Camargue, you will be booked into a charming hotel in the medieval town of Aigues-Mortes, where you can discover the fascinating buildings and city life – providing great opportunities for photography!
